Design Thinking in Practice – d-school - Hasso Plattner School of Design Thinking, University of Cape Town. Lesley is also a qualified Neuroscience Coach having completed the Neurozone Coaching Certificate.

Lesley Boddington has been designing, coaching and delivering on customised Leadership Development, aligned to Clients Strategic Goals, for the past 26 years, in her personal capacity as a Consultant, as well as for leading global and local Business Schools, including Duke Corporate Education. She has participated as a member of international Design Teams, designing high performance, high impact Leadership Development that delivered on the Client Organisations' Transformation Agendas. She has also been Faculty, Tutor and Learning Coach on Open Enrolment Programmes for these prestigious Business Schools and has taught and coached from Executive to Team Leader levels. High Performance, Transformational Leadership is Lesley's specialisation, through her partnership with Professor Harold M. Schroder, the Princeton world guru in High Performance Leadership, with whom she co-authored a book that will be published soon. Lesley has experience and expertise in Transformational Leadership through Transformative Thinking. She has deep insight into High Performance Leadership Behaviours that enable Mindshift in self and others and how to shift Fixed Mindsets to align Strategic Thinking and Execution to an organisation's Purpose, Values and Strategic Intent. She brings a unique blend of Neuroscience, Design Thinking and High-Performance Strategic Thinking to her designs, coaching and delivery. She also has extensive experience in Action Learning, Experiential Learning, Immersive Learning and high impact Leadership Simulations. She is currently the lead facilitator on a Values driven culture transformation project for Enaex. Lesley is also currently the project lead in designing, coaching and developing the High Impact Change Facilitators for the Netcare Group, who are embarking on a major Digitisation Strategy.
